How does your group currently engage with and involve your community? (Tell us how you connect with them, gather feedback and ensure community voices shape your work?)

Community Impact Partnership potential

What is the opportunity or challenge your community is facing that your group wants to address?

What steps has your group already taken towards this goal, and what are you planning next?

How does your group currently connect with tangata whenua? (If you do not yet have connections, how do you plan to build these relationships or strengthen cultural capability?)

Why do you believe a partnership is the right next step for your group? (What skills, connections or development do you hope to gain from working with Council on this project?)

Describe the impact you hope to achieve, and how it aligns with your long-term vision and this programme's priorities?

Supporting information

Include anything useful for us to better understand your development goals, what you are trying to achieve in your community, and why your group or community should be part of the programme. Allow time to gather the information and documents you need.

Evidence of wider community support is helpful. This could be:

- Letters of support – from organisations that know your group and community mahi/ projects. This is particularly important if your project is a collaboration – we will want to see that the other parties you mention are on board.
- Unsolicited support such as emails or Facebook comments complimenting you and your activity (or highlighting the problem you're trying to address) can be powerful endorsements to include with your application.

Evidence of a need in your community is valuable to add. This could be:

- news items, including community/school newsletters
- survey data
- social media posts
- anecdotal stories from locals (quotes).

Visuals are a great way to enhance your application. Images, photos, concept drawings help set the scene and can often describe your need or what you want to achieve better than words can.
